

Amariah Chaplin, 10, second from left, and Brooke Badger, 11, of St. Joseph University School, answer judges questions about their project Night Light Bright Light that cuts power consumption at the Invention Convention, where kids display their inventions to solve everyday problems, at the Buffalo Museum of Science on Sunday, April 29, 2018. More than 120 elementary and middle school children participated.
John Hickey/Buffalo News

Amariah Chaplin, 10, and Brooke Badger, 11, of St. Joseph University School, talk about their project Night Light Bright Light that cuts power consumption.
John Hickey/Buffalo News

Emery Hlubin, left, and Maeve Garvey, of St. Joseph University School, show off their Shirts Unlimited recycled items at the Invention Convention.
John Hickey/Buffalo News